- 1 The instructor was there to help his students out in any way, shape, or form.

- 3 The professor was an excellent online instructor. He always contacted me back on a regular basis when I needed "it." Overall, a fantastic teacher who really cared.

- 7 There weren't any areas that I thought were excellent. The podcasts were interesting, and the book wasn't too bad. But there wasn't an area that I was too impressed with. There wasn't much feed back either on how we were doing. It was basically a teach-yourself class that I paid $650 for.
- 8 This class was very well organized and all of the online content was very helpful!

- Some of the questions on the test weren't fair to ask.

- I thought the group discussions were very shallow. A typical group "discussion" would go like this:
 Question: Describe the Reconstruction's effect on the blacks who lived in the South.
 Answer: "I think racism is bad, and it hurt black people."
 Response 1: "Yeah I think racism is bad too."
 Response 2: "I liked how you said racism is bad."
 Response 3: "Good point about racism."
 I mean, we are required to respond 4 or 5 times a discussion to the posts other people make, but come on. What am supposed to do with that? Most of the comments in the discussion group are pretty meaningless. I tried to make comments that had some thought to them. I probably lost a lot of points due to not posting 40 worthless comments like I showed above.
 Also, I thought there was a significant portion of the grade for the class given to Essays that we needed to write. I thought they were graded VERY toughly for a 100 level History class. I am not a writer nor a journalist, and its not even an English class. But I will have learned all the major topics that this class wanted to teach me. Yet I lost a lot of points due to not knowing how much detail was needed, especially on the Exams. Both the Short Answer (what that means was not explained-if you think its a paragraph or two then you'd be wrong), or Essay parts of the Exams were graded very toughly.
- My only complaint of this class is that I did not feel that the instructor explained what he wanted clearly enough on the tests and some of the written assignments. For example on a test we would have to answer an essay question or short answer, although in my opinion I thought it was answered, I would always lose points. The instructor needs to clearly state what exactly he is looking for.

11 The grading is not explained, more than once I had to go through tests and correct the grading. Maps were so confusing I googled parts if it, because it was not to be found in this book. Nothing is thoroughly explained, especially timing of assignments. This class was difficult for me to even complete because I felt I was wasting my time on busy work and not getting to explore the history.
